DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments filed 11/26/02 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The applicant's argument is on the ground that "Fujii teaches a liquid, not a gas bearing." This is not found persuasive because in the art of bearing the hydrodynamic gas bearing might include gas or liquid as shown in Khan (U. S. Pat. No. 6,242,831, column 1, lines 20-30) and the hydrodynamic fluid bearing might include gas or liquid as shown in Kennedy et al. (U. S. Pat. No. 6,181,039, column 1, lines 55-67). In addition, it is noted that during prosecution the claim can be interpreted as broad as possible. It is also noted that claim 1 is an open-ended claim and it does not exclude the possibility that the magnetic fluid recited in line 7 is not located at the hydrodynamic gas-bearing portion.

As a result, the claim is still deemed proper and repeated hereinafter.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 15-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Fujii et al.

Regarding claim 15, Fujii et al. show a bearing structure having a hydrodynamic gas bearing (Figure 1), comprising:

- Fixed components (12, 16, 26); and
- Rotatable components (2, 36, 38) which are supported by the fixed components for rotation,
- Wherein the fixed components and the rotatable components are kept in non-contact state during rotation of the rotatable components,
- The bearing structure further comprising a conductive structure (68, magnetic fluid, 16) having a magnetic fluid (column 5, line 10-20) for electrically connecting the fixed components and the rotatable components either in the region where there is no gas flow generated by suction or discharge of a gas for generating hydrodynamic pressure at the hydrodynamic gas bearing portion, or in the region where the gas flow is negligible (when the magnetic fluid is in the hydrodynamic gas bearing portion, gas flow is negligible).

Regarding claims 16 and 17, it is noted that Fujii et al. also show a spindle motor and a hard disk drive having the spindle motor.

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
